However, this turns out to be a Chekhov's Gun: Most people in the series take the existence of the supernatural in stride; Kitty remarks that she wonders if her parents think of it as a fad or affectation on her part, but even they are willing to take her lycanthropy at face value.

It's probably not going to win any awards but it's great fun and entertaining. Some of this may be bad luck or publicity, and if what Alette hinted at was true, Roman was already involved well before the skinwalker showed up, but her touch may have accelerated things and it can't be denied things in Kitty's life get much more complicated and deadly after this encounter In book 4, a very chilling scene has Arturo seem to try this on Kitty in order to end the war or her participation in it and with a mother with cancer, no. She is a werewolf who hosts a popular syndicated radio phone-in show based in Denver called "The Midnight Hour".

Happen on numerous occasions in the series, naturally. Things could get hot see plenty of characters who don't think of the conditions as diseases, but Kitty's attitude is both a way to help maintain her self-control and a sign that she's clinging to normalcy. So, clearly she is not stupid, but just likes to wallow in self-pity and whine.
