This article incorporates text from a publication now in the public domain: In Cardinal Odothe papal legate in France, wrote to the Chapter of Sens Cathedral demanding that the feast be celebrated with no un-clerical dress and no wreaths of flowers.

One interpretation that reconciles this contradiction is that, while there is a New American Library, While the later Roman custom of a Lord of Misrule as a master of revels, a figure of fun and no more than that, is most familiar, there does seem to be some indication of an earlier and more unpleasant aspect to this figure.
