Simon's comes from Paul Redfern, funded by the City of Brunswick to attempt the first, unfortunately ill-fated, flight from the east coast to South America. His early recollections include seeing navy hurricane hunters fly over the Atlantic in search of storms before the days of satellites, viewing open Indian graves during an archaeological dig, evacuating the island at Hurricane Dora's approach, and returning to the destruction left in its wake. SimonsisessentiallyDoster'sefforttopreservethelegacyofthearea.His ties to the island date to the early s, when his father's family vacationed there before the construction of a mainland causeway.
